Nicolas Magie was brought up on the outskirts of Bordeaux, in the suburb of Cenon where his family had a restaurant. Nicholas Magie was just twelve when his family was forced to give up their restaurant – he vowed one day he would come back and open another restaurant. His first restaurant ‘La Cape’ opened in a converted house in 1999 in Cenon. He went on to gain a Michelin star there in 2004. In 2012 Nicolas Magie took over the kitchens at the Michelin starred Saint-James in Bouliac. He says that his greatest inspiration is that of Aquitaine, his native region and of the seasons.
